

THE CATHEDRAL COMPLEX OF PUY EN VELAY

Discovering the hidden treasures of Le Puy.

Attached to the northern end of the cathedral, the 12th-century cloisters are largely Romanesque. This space was reserved for the cathedral's canons, or secular clergy. It displays a wide variety of capitals, some with pictorial imagery, allowing us to see how styles have changed. Its 12th-century gate is a rare example of Romanesque ironwork.

A 13th-century fresco in the chapter room depicts the crucifixion. There is also a Museum of Religious Art in the machicolation building which has been redesigned to house the recent arrival of an important collection of embroidered liturgical artefacts dating from the 15th to the 19th centuries.

The visitor circuit also takes you through the basement areas of the cloister to the lower room of the machicolation, where a film traces the development of the site.

Designated world heritage site by UNESCO as routes of Santiago de Compostela in France
